Business Technology - Junior Associate - Asia Pacific

Overview

In order to support the continuous and strong growth of McKinsey's Business Technology practice we are currently seeking exceptional business professionals with a passion for consulting and technology to join the firm in our Asia region which includes our Singapore, Bangkok, Tokyo, Sydney, Melbourne, Delhi, Chennai and Mumbai offices.

Detailed Description

McKinsey's Business Technology Practice is a functional practice within McKinsey. It is comprised of nearly 750 McKinsey consultants globally who help clients think strategically about how to use technology to create fundamental business change. Business Technology consultants work on the same types of engagements as anyone else at McKinsey. On balance, however, we do more technology-related projects than others at the firm. In addition, our consultants develop particular expertise in technology, whether in a particular industry or in a functional area.

Why would I want to join the Business Technology Practice rather than another part of McKinsey?

Technology is one of the most significant drivers of business change. If you have a long-term interest in technology, joining the Business Technology Practice allows you to pursue this interest while developing the CEO perspective for which McKinsey is known. In addition to the "McKinsey toolkit," you will develop a strategic competence in technology, just as others in the firm develop a specific competence in a functional area or in an industry that they are passionate about.

Business Technology in Asia:

Business Technology consultants in Asia share a passion for helping clients use technology strategically to change industries, transform business models, and create competitive advantage. We advise some of the largest, most innovative companies in a variety of industries, including Financial Services, Telecom, Media, High-Tech, Transport and Logistics, FMCG, Auto and Advanced Industries.

What the Business Technology Practice has to offer:

- The Business Technology Practice offers all of the opportunities that McKinsey offers – Leadership, Personal Growth, Impact, Choice, Steep Learning Curve
- PLUS an opportunity to become a tech-savvy business leader and build fluency in technology – one of the most important drivers of value today – and harness the power of technology to solve world-shaping challenges faced by businesses, governments, and society.
- In addition, you will be part of a fast-growing entrepreneurial community and work with like-minded, fun and supportive colleagues – who share your passion for technology – to build a critical capability for a great firm

Desired Skills

- A history of strong academic performance, preferably having attended top tier schools
- 3+ years of professional work experience in technology management or technology consulting. You may come from a technology company, a technology consulting firm, a top tier consulting firm with a focus on technology or a high-performing corporate IT department with ambition to work on a strategic level and broaden their scope.
- Solid functional knowledge and experience, including but not limited to Digital Technology, eCommerce, IT strategy consulting, IT Modernization
- Exceptional problem-solving ability. Irrespective of your degree or experience, you should excel at solving problems that require logical reasoning, creative thinking, comfort with numbers, and the ability to untangle complex issues
- Demonstrated leadership within or outside a work setting. You should be someone who frequently takes initiative and is eager to break new ground—as seen through leadership roles
- Demonstrated career trajectory - evidence of taking on larger responsibilities and/or more senior roles
- Other intrinsic skills such as strategic management perspective, strong interpersonal and communication skills
- Candidates with fluency in both English and local languages.
